the symbol. Once again standing in the fitness of womanhood, proving that the attributes of the soul and character are not dependent upon the capacity of sex or age.

She will shortly assume the grandness which no otherago would permit. Hundreds, yes thousands of our citizens, and of course foreigners, who come from foreign lands and sunny climes shall see such beauty in the mountains as in states in their subtropical climes.

And she strengthens by example those facing nothing but the hard extreme difficulties of such mass. What she gains in head, far greater responsibilities shall not be at expense of heart.

And we who know Miss Grace Gocher realize that the community shall be nobler and broader through assumption of the duties imposed upon her by all appreciative people."

The response by Miss Grace Gocher, she says, does not fully express her sense of appreciation and gratitude.

When I think of your hospitality, of this most fit for a king, of the cultured quotations, the refined music, the bright readings, the gracious and intellectual tastes, I must exclaim, "And this is New Mexico!" New Mexico where it can truthfully be said, that those who return north or east disappointed are those who make exceedingly short visits, and care indeed is he, who, having lived here twice three years ever returns to his home there to remain. There not many who have told, that they came for a visit of a few weeks or months, whether their intentions of returning a life interest in New Mexico.

"It will be a great country." Every one may not agree with me now, but when the party of 32 moisture-soaked here, in all kinds of fruits and grains, plants and vegetables, as it will be whence the agriculturalists shall begin at the spurs of the earth, no paper or pen has written as that of the future, nor some very strong language can compare to the first of culture, that can compare, of all others, for most beautiful of lands the most delicious, or upon any other basis, for greatest commercial value obtained by courageous and hard working people. And if you possess courage enough, to go to establish such conditions, then get lost, have come at a descent price, and the cost of $100 per acre, which cannot be exceeded, although, out of the most competing of states, the 100 and $100 goes in this region.

I am glad to be identified with them parties of such a promising

LAND! Do You Want It?

There are thousands of acres of choice land in this valley which the government is giving away to people who are looking for homes and investment. I make a specialty of securing relinquishments and desirable locations. Have a checklist of desired valley land at prices that will interest you. Also, town lots and improved property on which you can double your money within a few months' time.
